“First Lady” of Television

Decades before playing Rose on The Golden Girls and Sue Ann on The Mary Tyler Moore Show, Betty White (1922–2021) was already a television veteran. At the dawn of the TV age, the 17-year-old White sang and danced on an experimental 1939 broadcast in Los Angeles, her hometown. A decade later she became host and producer of Hollywood on Television, and in 1952 she became one of the first women to produce a nationally televised sitcom, Life With Elizabeth, also playing the title character.

When White died peacefully in her sleep on New Year’s Eve, 2021, days shy of her 100th birthday, she left an irreplaceable legacy: the adoration of generations of fans — and joy and laughter destined to reverberate into the future.

“That twinkle in her eye said it all,” says Dale Stephanos, whose vibrant artwork graces the Betty White Forever® stamp. “Her humor, charisma, and genuine love for life made her unforgettable. I wanted to embody that spirit. Creating her portrait was an honor and a challenge.”

Stephanos and art director Greg Breeding sought both to capture the beloved star’s likeness and to hint at White’s tireless advocacy for animal welfare. After some artistic experimentation, they agreed that including a pet in the portrait was distracting. In the final artwork Stephanos pictured White wearing a paw-shaped earring, “a little Easter egg,” he says, “to reflect her love for animals in a quiet but meaningful way.” ■

Freshwater Fishing Lures

Celebrate the art of angling with this colorful pane of stamps, featuring close-up photographs of five popular lures.

486504 / FOREVER 73¢ / FULL PANE OF 20, 5 DESIGNS / $14.60

Hooked on Design

Photographing small, inanimate objects and bringing them to life is no easy task. For Freshwater Fishing Lures, Sarah Cramer Shields worked magic with her camera and produced a set of eye-catching stamps that elevate fishing lures from practical tools to striking objects.

Mainly a portrait photographer in her hometown of Charlottesville, Virginia, Shields gained recognition for her work on a series called “Porchraits” (porch portraits) during the COVID-19 pandemic. Shifting from portraiture to still-life photography for this project required a new approach. Photographing the vibrant colors and fine details of the lures required intricate lighting and exact angles to highlight their craftsmanship.

“The hardest part was capturing the designs without any glare,” says Shields. “Additionally, finding the right perspective for the viewer to fully appreciate each lure took some effort.”

Together, Shields and art director Greg Breeding photographed more than 30 lures, each in numerous “poses.” Lures are, after all, a facsimile of life, and positioning them in ways that suggest movement or personality added to their appeal.

“They were all unique,” she says. “I wanted each of them to feel different when I set them in place to shoot.”

The finished pane is a work of art, balancing a variety of shapes and colors carefully arranged at different angles. Whether you’re an angler, collector, or photography enthusiast, these stamps offer something to admire. ■

Allen Toussaint

This virtuoso musical genius helped shape the special blend of rhythm and blues for which New Orleans is known.

486004 / FOREVER 73¢ / PANE OF 20, 1 DESIGN / $14.60

From New Orleans to the World

New Orleans is famous for its music, and much credit goes to favorite son Allen Toussaint (1938–2015) for shaping the city’s special blend of R&B and putting it out to the world. Over a long career, the virtuoso pianist, singer, songwriter, composer, arranger, and producer stood behind scores of hits across multiple genres.

Toussaint lent his genius to a wide range of musicians, and many others have covered his songs. His “Fortune Teller,” first recorded by Benny Spellman in 1962, was picked up by the likes of the Rolling Stones, The Who, Iggy Pop, and Robert Palmer and Alison Krauss. “Yes We Can,” released by Lee Dorsey in 1970, later gave the Pointer Sisters their first hit single, and Toussaint’s most personal song, “Southern Nights” (1975), became a huge hit for Glen Campbell.

“He was everywhere,” says art director Ethel Kessler. “All the top performers have either played with him or played his music.” Yet Toussaint remained virtually unknown outside New Orleans until late in his career. After Hurricane Katrina destroyed his home and studio in 2005, Toussaint needed to change directions. He began touring, charming audiences around the world with his good-humored stories and his repertoire.

The stamp features a 2007 photograph of Toussaint taken in New York City. “It captures that something special I was looking for,” says Kessler, “a moment where he seemed to be having a good time deep inside his music.” ■

Behind the Design

Creating the Battlefields of the American Revolution stamps.

A study in artist Greg Harlin's process for creating the Battlefields of the American Revolution stamp art — beginning with a reference image, moving onto preliminary sketches, and finishing with the final painting.

Turning an idea into actual stamp art is a much more detailed process than the size of the final piece might suggest.

Consider, for example, the 2025 Battlefields of the American Revolution stamps. Issued in anticipation of commemorating the 250th anniversary of the United States, these stamps honor the battlefields where so many sacrificed to make our celebration possible.

To do justice to these important places that witnessed vital turning points in the war, the first step was to find the right illustrator. Art director Derry Noyes was intrigued by the work of Greg Harlin, a veteran stamp artist known for his meticulously researched portrayals of the colonial era.

For each of the five stamp illustrations, Harlin began with rough concept sketches, exploring iconic moments from each battle. He then refined each draft into a preliminary sketch. To bring his compositions further into focus, he frequently used himself as a model, dressing in historical garb and posing as every person in a scene to create photo collages that captured nuances of pose or lighting. He then scanned the sketches and printed them on watercolor paper to use as a base for his first paintings. These watercolor sketches — completed compositions with approximate color values — prepared him to begin final paintings in even finer detail on watercolor paper at 22.25 inches by 8.25 inches. The final paintings were then scanned so that any changes requested by historians could be made digitally.

“I hope to share how it felt to be there when history was happening,” Harlin says. “I’ve had the pleasure to work with some incredible researchers and historians who can, with their knowledgeable and enthusiastic words, breathe life into a moment of time. I strive to do something similar in my paintings.”

From the first rough sketch to the final stamp that rolls off the presses, attention to historical accuracy and commitment to detail reflect the sense of responsibility felt by everyone who helps develop the U.S. stamp program. ■

Want to see more? Each step of Harlin's process for creating these stamps is documented in the Behind the Design: Battlefields of the American Revolution Collector's Set, now available to order.
